The greatest voluntary sector challenge is to optimize the work and time of your valuable volunteer resources. Our offer is to help you do that in the context of your specific mission and charity market.

- What are the characteristics of a great team?
- What are the vital differences between leadership and management?
- Is everyone in the team truly on the same page regarding opportunities, priorities and goals?
- Does everyone in the team share a common vision of what success looks like and by when?
- How do we inspire commitment and build emotional connection?
- How do great teams hold each other accountable?
- What are the four secrets of great execution?

About Chris Atkinson

Chris has a passion for executive team development and in 2001 he became one of Microsoft's youngest Vice Presidents.

Chris's biggest contribution to the success of his teams was his decision to become a coach to his leaders. Chris regularly contributed to Microsoft's High Potential Leaders Program and facilitated growth strategy workshops with the CEOs and their leadership teams of Microsoft's business partners in Asia, Europe, South America and the United States.

In late 2013 Chris retired from Microsoft and, with his wife and four daughters, moved to the family home in Guernsey where he is now an executive team development consultant and coach. Chris looks forward to contributing to the mission of The Guernsey Community Foundation and would be delighted to discuss how 'Good to Great' can help you and your team achieve your full potential.

Chris will be happy to talk to you confidentially in more detail about the type of client work he has undertaken.
